- Your best friend is running for Class President. You realize that your friend is obsessed with obtaining power and would be destructive to the group if elected. Should you stick by him/her to avoid losing a friend, campaign for the other side, or try to change your friend?
- One of your closest friends on your team has broken the rules. The coach has announced at practice that this person is to be removed from the team. You believe that the punishment is harsh and unfair and you want to persuade the rest of the team to protest this decision. Write a speech that you could give that would incite them to act. Identify the violation, state the current punishment, and give your reasons for protesting and offer an alternative punishment. Remember, you want to convince your audience to do what you want.
